A Title Across the Page

This introduction runs across the full width of the page above the two columns, as an abstract or a standfirst would, and it goes on for long enough to wrap onto a second and even a third line before the columns begin underneath it.

The first column starts here and continues along with ordinary words to fill a few lines of the column.

Paragraph 2 of column one continues along with ordinary words to fill a few lines of the column.

The second column starts here and carries on in the same way until it ends.

Paragraph 2 of column two carries on in the same way until it ends.