A Title Across the Page

This introduction runs across the full width of the page above the two columns, as an abstract or a standfirst would.

The first column starts here and continues along with ordinary words to fill a few lines of the column.

Another paragraph continues along with ordinary words to fill a few lines of the column.

The second column starts here and carries on in the same way until it ends.

More of the second column carries on in the same way until it ends.